Dear Mr. Temple:

The Web Application Development internship was brought to my attention by my Web Application Development teacher, Jared Fast. This internship is an important opportunity to help aid in my future career in Web Application Development. The skills that I can present are collaboration with team members, experience in the field, and even designed and created presentations for larger projects.

The qualifications that I have for this position consist of taking and am currently in a Web Application Development class, collaborated with many people to create longer based web pages and websites, and even designed and created presentations. As someone who has been intrigued and wanting to learn and pursue a career in the technology field, I have had experience with being on teams like a robotics team for Shadow Hills Intermediate between August 2017 to December 2017; another team that I have been lucky to be a part of was for CART's Showcase intended to show and present to groups what projects that your team have constructed. Being part of a team showed me the importance of always having to be there for your teammates if something came up in their life, so I learned the importance of time management and always finding ways to always make it on time. Within the Web Application Development class the languages that I have learned relatively well are HTML and CSS, while currently learning JavaScript.

The Web Application Development class that I am currently enrolled in, sparked my interest in the field to learn more about how websites work along with the actual creation of and maintenance of these websites. The class combined with my team, listening, and presentation skills all create a hopeful candidate for the internship. If you would be able to find some time for an interview on the internship position that would be more than kind, my email is i.z.maldonado.2851@gmail.com, and I thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Isaak Maldonado
